

Round About

"It takes me about three minutes to shine a pair of shoes," says one shiner in Columbia. "In rush hours I have shined three pairs in five minutes, working on them all at the same time."

"It takes smiles to win customers," says Jimmy Moscow of the College Inn. Jimmy has been in the confectionary business in Columbia for the last thirteen years.

"If you are grouchy when a customer comes into your shop," he continued, "he feels that you do not care for his trade. The next time he will go somewhere else. One has to smile at all times, no matter how badly he feels, or how things go wrong. Smile! smile! smile!"

"People only like to eat things when they are feeling good. And a smile helps to make them feel good."

The contrivance of special dishes is a result of inspiration as well as thought, he says.

Three years ago, on the day of the Kansas-Missouri football game, his store was packed. He received a number of checks for small sums. The next day, he found a check for $1 signed "I Beg Your pardon." He thought it was a hoax, but no one came back to take up the check.

Several days later he thought of the check again. Then came the inspiration. He devised a new sundae, calling it "I Beg Your Pardon." It proved popular and still is on the menu.

"Peanuts are a profitable crop in Missouri, and the farmers of this state are beginning to realize it more and more each day," said Fulton S. White of West Plains, in a report to the Missouri State Board of Agriculture. Mr. White says that Missouri can grow as good peanuts as Oklahoma, Arkansas or Texas, and that the peanut industry has spread to great areas annually that were formerly considered unfit for peanut growing.

The peanut is a tender annual and should not be planted until all danger of frost is past. Peanuts weigh twenty-two pounds a bushel in the hull and planted and, therefore, require about two bushels to the acre. Southern Missouri produced a crop of peanuts in 1918 which yielded $2.47 to the acre in some cases. Peanuts are also a very cheap food for hogs and are used for feed and hay. The cost of raising peanuts is not in excess of corn.

Columbia as It Was

Thirty Years Ago.

Two young ladies of this city, Misses Jennie and Fannie Ball, had an odd experience last week. The had boiled a fine ham which was placed upon the table in the dining room as was customary. Strange to relate, the ham disappeared while the young ladies were absent from the room for a short time.

J. C. Evans of Harlem, Mo., president of the Missouri State Horticultural Society, arrived Tuesday to attend the farmers meeting.

Twenty Years Ago.

At the City Council meeting Tuesday afternoon, a committee consisting of Messrs. Moss, Bergeman and Lowrey was appointed to recommend some action in regard to the organization of a fire department and the securing of proper apparatus.

President McKinley has nominated Thomas J. See, of Missouri to be professor of mathematics in the Navy. He was graduated from the University of Missouri in 1889.

Thirty years ago this week: The Columbia Fire Insurance Company organizes: President, D. H. Hickman; vice-president, John Machir; secretary, Irwin C. Hockaday, general agent, C. S. Stone.
